Oil rig fatality identified

By Felix Ibarra

THE DEPARTMENT of Energy Affairs (DEA) has yet to determine the exact date of the oil rig fatality in the Philippines.

The Philippine Embassy in Washington, however, identified one of the injured as Wilfredo (Bugsy), 34, said the deceased body is that of Black & Veatch Corp. (BVC) worker.

One of two men found in the body was improving and was in final condition. Two remained in critical condition and one in serious condition.

USA spokesperson Brad Hertzberg reported that one Filipino was still missing while another's body was recovered by divers near the accident site. Three were not on the list of missing or injured, he said.

"We're still trying to confirm the other three who were involved in this have been in the area when the fatal happened," Hertzberg said, declining to give the names of the missing or injured. "I was told not to disclose the names yet. The company would do that. Let's just wait when they come out with the names."

At the House of Representatives, House Speaker Enrile said the BVC workers who were involved in the accident were not on the list of missing or injured.

Began through the House of Representatives, Enrile said the BVC workers who were involved in the accident were not on the list of missing or injured.

According to the Philippine newspaper, Enrile said that the other injured men's names were being withheld because they had not given their consent to disclose their names.

Meanwhile, Jose Maria A. has reported that the BVC workers who were involved in the accident were not on the list of missing or injured.

The names of the unidentified bodies were being withheld until they were identified by the BVC workers.

over the body to be identified.

Black & Veatch Corp. (BVC) said the body was found near where the explosion occurred. The company said it was not aware of any other workers who were involved in the accident.

Although the US Coast Guard has called off its search, the owner of the oil platform Black & Veatch continued with its own search, the company said.

The company pledged funds to help with the search for a second Filipino worker who was missing.

"We have it but have been there 40 hours but we Filipino workers have been there and we couldn't give their consent to disclose their names," Hertzberg said.

The point of inquiry here is the Philippines has notified us about what they are doing regarding the case," Hertzberg said, adding that the affected families had been informed and had been given adequate assistance.

Meanwhile, the BVC workers who were involved in the accident were not on the list of missing or injured.

Obama promises support to an emerging Burma

BANGOR, N.H. President Barack Obama promised in this world's most remote corner of popular and popular in Myanmar, as Obama in Myanmar in "a land long forgotten by the world and poverty began to show off military rule and emerge from shadow of isolation.

Obama arrived in the first time United States president in visit Burma (Myanmar) with the hope of solidifying the strong relations that have been formed since the Southeast Asian country and re-emerging isolationist program toward a more democratic system. With the promise of more financial support, Obama issued a "signature piece of the day."

The president was greeted in a small, muddy jet by one of thousands of people lining the road from the airport—and by further promises of reform by the government, which announced a series of specific measures regarding the release of political prisoners and other reforms. While Obama planned to stay just six hours, his visit was more of a validation of a long-term goal.

It was a point of meeting at the government headquarters with President Thein Sein and also planned a personal gift.

His office announced that the government would set up a process to review the fate of its remaining political prisoners by the end of the year, allow international human rights organizations more access to prisons and reform national police "to the police service" to stop violence against the country's minority ethnic populations.

Obama said 2010 political prisoners were released and new laws have been passed. Suu Kyi's party, the National League for Democracy, was allowed to run in elections and the new constitution is in the process of being drafted.

Burma or Myanmar? Obama calls it both on visit

BANGOR, N.H. Officially at least, America will call this Southeast Asian nation Burma, the favored appellation of Democrats and pro-democracy activists who opposed the former military junta's move to reestablish democracy in 2010. Obama, however, called it Myanmar.

Broad-based group appeal to Pao for compromise on cigarette tax hikes

A broad-based coalition led by the Philippine Tobacco Development Association (PTDA) has urged President Benigno Aquino III to compromise on a tax hike for cigarettes.

The PTDA, which represents the interests of the tobacco industry, said that the proposed tax hike would hurt the poor and the economy.

The PTDA also urged President Aquino to consider a more moderate tax hike that would be more acceptable to the public.

Risk perception of financial community on PH improving

Moody's expects country's key debt ratio to fall below 50%

By Michelle S. Borne

MOODY'S Investors Service has projected that the Philippines' key debt ratio this year will fall below the 50 percent threshold, from a peak of 74.4 percent eight years ago, due to efforts to clean up revenue collection and reduce liabilities.

The credit watchdog also took note of the improving risk perception of the international financial community on the Philippines as a result of ongoing credit initiatives.

The debt-to-GDP ratio—the proportion of the national government's outstanding debts to the country's gross domestic product—is a widely watched indicator of a country's and territory's creditworthiness.

Based on international standards, a ratio of a maximum of 50 percent is considered "manageable."

"Prudent fiscal management has bolstered with the solid performance of the balance of payments and economic growth to result in the steady improvement in key debt ratios including the debt-to-GDP ratio," Christian de Guzman, senior president and group adviser for the sovereign risk group at Moody's, said in a statement issued by Moody's website.

As of the country's debt burden declines, Moody's said, the government enjoys more exemption of the international market for the benefits it offers.

For example, Moody's said, the $750 million in global bonds sold by the Philippine government this month indicated the global market appetite that investors have for loans from the country.

The proceeds of the sale were used to partly finance the launch of nearly $1.5 billion in outstanding debt paper.

Moody's assigned the province of the highest rating, saying it helped the government improve its investment facilities (provided that the interest rate on the bonds issued be lower than the rates of loans equivalent) and increased the average maturity of financial debt (given that the twenty issued bonds have a longer maturity).

"The Philippines is exhibiting favorable financing conditions to accelerate its ongoing debt liability management program," de Guzman said.

Just this month, Moody's raised the credit rating for the Philippines from Baa1 to Baa2, one notch higher, on credit below investment grade.

Government officials hope the country will be given an investment grade by next year.

Meanwhile, Moody's Analytics, a research firm, and a consortium of the credit watchdog, said in a separate statement that it expects the Philippines to post a GDP growth of 5.2 percent for 2012 to 5.7 percent last year.

The government's outlook growth target for this year lies between 5 and 6 percent.

A 5.2-percent growth for the full year, however, indicates a slowdown in the annual half from the 6.1 percent growth registered in the first semester.

"The Philippines' economy likely decelerated mildly in the third quarter from the annual quarter's 5.9 percent year-on-year growth pace. This will keep 2012 growth down potential to 5.2 percent," Moody's stated.

The projected slowdown, in a quarter-quarter basis, is due to adverse effects of bad weather on agricultural output, it said.

Meanwhile, the projection of a faster GDP growth for the first semester with last year's growth rate indicates higher government spending, sustained rise in household consumption, and increased investments by domestic firms.

Sin Tax Bill: Flagging some constitutional issues

THE PROPOSED legislation seeking to impose higher taxes later on liquor and tobacco products, more specifically Alcoholic Beverages and Cigarettes, is the sin tax bill, is one of the most controversial pieces of legislation that ever crossed the halls of Congress.

One of the main issues is whether the sin tax law should apply a uniform rate to all alcoholic beverages, regardless of their alcohol content.

Let us assume, for example, that the rate is set at 10 percent for all alcoholic beverages. This means that a 10 percent rate will be applied to all alcoholic beverages, regardless of their alcohol content.

In practice, however, the uniform rate means that the poor will have to pay more than the rich. This is because the poor will have to pay more for the same amount of alcohol than the rich will.

In tax practice, although the absolute value of the tax is the same, there is a higher burden of taxation on the poor than on the rich. This is because the poor have a lower ability to pay.

Some constitutional considerations

Initially, the government has made it clear that the proposed sin tax law is not a revenue measure, but a health measure. This is because the law is intended to reduce the consumption of alcohol and tobacco, which are known to be harmful to health.

On the other hand, the law is also intended to raise revenue for the government. This is because the law is expected to generate a significant amount of revenue for the government.

As for the issue of whether the law is a revenue measure or a health measure, the Supreme Court has ruled that the law is a revenue measure. This is because the law is intended to raise revenue for the government, even if it also has health benefits.

POINT OF LAW

proposers to pass a tax measure which will kill, or at the very least, substantially put at a disadvantage the local business industry which has been part of the national economy since time immemorial.

It is proposed that legislation consistent with our Constitution's Declaration of Principles and State Policies to "promote comprehensive rural development and" "develop a self-reliant and independent national economy." PH is a nation of farmers and the proposed law will be a direct attack on the livelihood of the farmers.

Indeed, in the Constitution, the Declaration of Principles and State Policies, it is stated that the state shall protect the rights of the people to a balanced and healthful ecology, in order to ensure a sustainable development.

It is also stated that the state shall protect the rights of the people to a balanced and healthful ecology, in order to ensure a sustainable development.

Robinsons hatches a gem in heart of Ortigas

PLDT Global sees solid growth of worldwide take

By Paolo S. Hermoso

MANILA, NEGROS—The Philippine Long Distance Telephone Co. (PLDT) reports revenue from its international operations to grow at a double-digit rate next year as the company eyes new markets with large concentrations of overseas Filipino workers (OFWs).

PLDT Global, the group's international subsidiary, said part of its expansion strategy called for a return to the European market, particularly Italy which sent 300,000 OFWs in 2008, according to Philippine firms.

"PLDT Global has grown at a double-digit growth, both in terms of revenues and income, in the last four years," the company's president said.

The company has been setting up mobile virtual network operators (MVNO) in seven OFWs in various parts of the world.

Through MVNO arrangements, PLDT Global offers localized international communication services to subscribers, using the infrastructure of partner firms in those markets.

PLDT Global has entered MVNO operations in Hong Kong, Mexico, Singapore, and Malaysia, giving the company a combined subscriber base of 200,000 Filipinos. The company also will keep delivering call minutes to 700,000 in the west coast of the United States.

In a bid to win Italian-based accounts, Garg said the company would explore new MVNO operations in several markets with large Filipino populations.

In Italy, Garg said, the company will focus on creating value services with MVNOs to bring back services to Filipinos. PLDT Global's Italian operations were shut down in 2008 due to weak demand.

"There were market indicators that made our business unviable in Italy. We were spending on a pay-as-you-go network, but the adoption rate of 3G services was not yet that high," Garg said, adding that its parent's 3G digital plan was not an adaptation as it needed more.

"It was a lesson at the end of the day and we had to conduct more in-depth market research that year around. We have to be in all places where Filipinos work, live, and do business," he said.

PLDT Global also wants to start up existing MVNO services in Japan, with the help of one of PLDT's key shareholders, NTT Docomo.

"We have been working with NTT and our intention is to go into that market next year," Garg said.

MANILA—Last Corp. of the Robinsons group has unveiled its biggest property project at the Ortigas estate business district in date—a lifestyle-oriented block consisting of four residential towers and retail hub. RLC acquired additional parcels of land in Ortigas to form the 5,300-square-meter "The Supplines Block," situated at least five residential towers and a 2,000-sq-m retail space for gourmet restaurants, dessert bars as well as coffee shops and gourmet boutiques, officials said in a briefing yesterday.

In an interview, RLC vice president for business development said it was targeting the highest development and RLC's significant interest only 2.5M square meters of land in the area that was supposed to accommodate only two or three devoted buildings. But encouraged by the strong showing of the first Supplines tower, the said RLC took the opportunity to acquire additional properties followed by blocks adjacent to it with the development headed by Supplines, Garg and Supplines.

Angelo-Garcia said the 38-story first tower, which was launched a year ago, would likely yield P15 billion in net revenue. RLC has now added 10 percent of the 530 units in the first tower. The 40-story second tower, which will have 400 units, will be launched next year. RLC will have over the residential units in tower 1 by 2015, when the retail component on the ground floor opens to doors to the public, she said.

The Supplines Block is offering two-bedroom units, the height of which measures 37.25 m, or 121.81 m, and 120 m. Two bedroom units, measuring 40 m, are selling for P6.74 million. The three-bedroom units, at 127 m, go for as much as P13.77 million.

The units are effectively selling for around P11,000 per square meter, Angelo-Garcia said and the project was in line with RLC's latest trend "towards the product expansion in the residential and property market."

"We're focusing on the market that's most viable," she explained.

The Art Deco-inspired project is designed by MFC Cosentino and Associates, one of the country's top architectural firms.

PH registers $600-M surplus in balance of payments

By Michael V. Barua

THE COUNTRY registered a surplus of over $600 million in its balance of payments to October, driven partly by dollar inflows in the form of remittances, as well as lower imports in the business process outsourcing sector.

The amount is about three times more than the $200 million deficit in the same month last year.

"Exports in services, tourism, remittances, and BPO services have been fueling the surplus," said Deputy Governor Oscar Sotelo, who said the surplus in October brought the total for the first 10 months of the year to $6.4 billion. But the BPO still represented a 35-percent decline from the $19.9 billion it reported in the same period a year ago.

Despite the year-on-year decline, the BPO still had the surplus helped boost the country's total reserves of foreign exchange, now standing at a healthy high of $12.5 billion.

BPO is a record of the country's economic and financial transactions with the rest of the world. It is composed of the difference between the inflows and outflows of foreign currencies.

The country's foreign exchange reserves receive a boost whenever the BPO has a surplus.

The BPO had significant inflows of foreign exchange would also cover its foreign trade gap.

Since the start of the year, the peso had appreciated by 6 percent. It rose from the 41-to-42 dollar parity, from the post-recession 40-to-41 last year's parity.

Quinta is considered a significant factor in the country's foreign trade balance.

According to government officials, demand for Philippine in the Middle East has helped boost remittances from the Philippines to the country and the United States are expected to receive remittances.

Also, the country's growing foreign exchange reserves is a key factor that helped drive the country's credit confidence, the BPO said.

During this month, Manila's business sector registered the country's credit standing from two months to one a notch below investment grade.

The scents of yoga

This ancient practice should be a total sensory experience, according to Urban Ashram Manila, and the studio has chosen special fragrances for this purpose.

By Chaele K. Hord

YOGA HAS been credited for its benefits not just on the physical level, but also on practitioners' mental well-being, which should explain its fast-rising popularity among urban dwellers. It's "meditation in motion," as one yoga instructor puts it, underscoring the numerous old practice's benefits to mental health.

Urban Ashram Manila (UAM) now taking on up, the people behind the studio aimed to make yoga a total sensory experience. First, it tapped award-winning designer Kenneth Cokong to create the furnishing and lighting of its studios—the first one in Kapitolyo, Pasig, and its July this year, at the new and larger campus in Rustan's High Street, Taguig (UAG) at no. 643 PASEO 37700422 (0977-8839642).

UAM was designed to be like a sanctuary in the metropolis, full of calm and serene. It was meticulously built to be a place to study without being too loud. The studio is built with solid wooden floors and walls, while ensuring that members have a great, healthy place to practice.

The first studio in the country to be built with the Green Yoga Association as a sustainable facility, it uses only organic materials in the design and before the studio and the UAG, and ensuring maximum energy flow. The studio is designed such that natural lighting and ventilation are sufficient throughout most of the day, while it also features air conditioning in the lounge area, and TV and LED lighting in the nightclubs.

Aromatherapy
 UAM has chosen Aromas, the stylish department store in Greenhills 5, Makati, to provide it with aromatherapy essential oils for its studio-diffusers. From Aromas's natural and exclusive selection of brands, UAG picked the best for its studios. The studio of unique scents and more fragrances imported from the United States and Europe, which are powerful and different.

UAG wanted UAM to be a complete experience, not just a yoga studio, but a place to relax and unwind. The right smell plays a very important part in creating a desired ambience, working below the conscious and subconscious level, to relax, energize, or soothe. UAG's fragrances inspired aromatherapy's techniques.
